The U.S. Department of Labor's TAACCCT grant program is a major investment in building the capacity of community colleges. Grant funds were used to create or enhance programs of study that lead to industry-recognized credentials, upgrade equipment, support student success toward completion, and more. TAACCCT supported colleges to better serve workers eligible for training under the TAA for Workers program, as well as a broad range of other adults.

Ohio TechNet was developed as a result of a TAACCCT grant. This statewide consortium of 11 Ohio community colleges, 500+ employers, and workforce partners worked collaboratively to address the skills gap by developing targeted manufacturing training programs for transitioning adults.
