15 MILLION NEW JOBS

Healthcare is one of the fastest growing industries in the country and represents the largest increase in new jobs over the next decade. The U.S. Labor Department estimates 15 million new jobs will be added to the national healthcare sector by 2022. As new technologies and legislation continue to impact the healthcare sector, the demand for managing healthcare information has never been greater.

EMERGING FIELD

Health Information Management (HIM) is a rapidly emerging field within the healthcare industry. HIM professionals work to acquire, analyze, and protect electronic health records. These highly trained professionals work with the latest technologies to manage, secure and protect healthcare information and data. They are vital parts of healthcare organizations of all sizes from private physician offices to large hospital complexes.

CAREER OPPORTUNITY

A wide variety of jobs are available in HIM, from health information technicians, to data analysts and directors of health information services. HIM professionals may vary in education level, (from high school diploma to graduate degree) but all HIM jobs require specialized training that is available at Weber State.
