"The Human Microbiome: A New Frontier That Might Just Affect Everything"

George Weinstock, Ph.D.

Jackson Laboratory

Wednesday, January 27, 2016

3 p.m. • Student Center Theatre

"Virtually every process is affected by the microbiome, and we are often thought of as super organisms because of the detailed integration between our human and microbial cells. Technology is now allowing detailed insights into this complex ecosystem that makes us who we are."

Admission is free and the campus community is encouraged to attend, as the talk is designed to appeal to all audiences.
